

U.S. History
ABROAD

U.S. History Abroad courses ensure that your child will be taught the same requirements outlined in the History and Social Science Standards of Learning for Virginia Public Schools.

As a former homeschooling mom in the Foreign Service, it was important for me to ensure that our kids would not fall behind their Stateside peers in American history.

So, I pored over Virginia's state guidelines and outlined a course curriculum that would cover the very same topics-- just like if our kids were sitting in a Virginia public school.

Parents who enroll their child in a U.S. History Abroad course can confidently transition their child back to public school after time spent overseas because the American history standards for each grade level will have been met.
